Discipline of Silence	"If we are truly looking for mystery in our understanding of God, how can there be anything more mysterious than an inexhaustible source of possibility, endless spontaneity, and surprise? A God beyond the reach of all human cognition, swamped in the mystical darkness of unknowing, falls into the irrelevance of intellectual abstraction when compared to a profoundly personal God who always outruns us, surprises us through acts of amazing grace, and opens up new and hitherto unexplored possibilities for new depths of relationship." --Frank G. Kirkpatrick, The Mystery and Agency of God
